

1) RE: Airplane Cell Phone Use - Airplanes are cramped, crowded vehicles with hostage patrons competing with an over abundance of oversized luggage because airlines are trying accommodate customers. I just returned on a flight from Detroit to Palm Beach on which cell phones were allowed except to take offs and landings. It was a madhouse. Please DO NOT authorize one more bit of negativeness. Have you ever sat next to someone who never stops talking to you? Cell phone use is just as annoying but if you allow it, there is no recourse.

#2) I am certain that you will be unable to avoid the horrible violent (and sexy) incidents on TV but one can only hope. The problem with children watching violence on TV is that there is no way to "feel" the pain of that violence. After all, often the injured actor is seen in the next episode. The same is true of the car crashes, the beatings, the sex, etc. The pain, costs, inconveniences, resulting damage to people's lives caused by these things being shown so often are rarely evident after the production is over. Where has civility gone? It's not showing up on American TV in any abundance!
